

ALPHA opens the left column here and the sentence continues onward across several lines of ordinary prose so that the block reads as a column rather than as a row of words sitting beside its neighbour which is what the layout pass needs in order to see two columns and this last line ends with DELTA

XRAY opens the right column here and it too continues onward with enough text to form a block that the reading order pass will visit only after it has finished with everything in the column to its left which is the whole point of the fixture and the assertion it supports ending with the WHISKEY